

TODAY'S HALFTIME SHOW

James Brown

Jacque Daughtry

Atlanta Rhythm Section

Today's special halftime show starts with the 24 Falcon Cheerleaders performing to "Danger Zone," the theme song from the movie, "Top Gun."

That will set the stage for the presentation of the song, "Atlanta'll Be Rockin,'" originally recorded by superstar singer James Brown, the famous Atlanta Rhythm Section, and a dozen Falcon players. Today James and the Rhythm Section combine their talents for you.

"Atlanta'll Be Rockin'" was recorded during the offseason and is designed to benefit charity. It was written by Jacque Daughtry and Buddy Causey, recorded at Lowery Studio and pressed by Georgia Record Pressing. It will be available at all Turtle's Records Stores in the metro area.

The record, sponsored by the Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Company, will benefit the Georgia Alliance for Children, Inc. That Alliance was formed in 1979 to aid troubled children in Georgia. The GAC is a private, non-profit organization which depends solely on donations. It has provided service to more than 230,000 children throughout Georgia.

The Falcon Cheerleaders are directed by D.C.A. instructor Laurie Bell. Call cheerleader coordinator Carol Breeding, 945-1111, to arrange public appearances of members of this group.

National Anthem

Oscar and Grammy winner ISAAC HAYES will kick off the 1987 Falcon season with the singing of the National Anthem. Known for the movie, "Shaft," Atlanta resident Hayes has also starred in other movies as well as the TV series, "The Rockford Files." Please join Isaac Hayes in proudly singing our National Anthem today.

the name Atlanta builds on.
